

Agnon Writing Competition

For Jewish high school students worldwide

Prose and poetry inspired by the writings of S.Y. Agnon

"When does a man write a good story? At the moment he didn't even think of writing it. It creates itself in his heart. Suddenly he is struck with an unrelenting burn to write, but when he tries to write – it has vanished! I never prepared myself to write a story, and any story I tried to prepare myself to write, I never did commit to paper nor will I ever write them."

S.Y. Agnon

The Agnon House in Jerusalem, together with ATID and WebYeshiva.org, announce a writing competition for Jewish high school students for works of prose or poetry written through the inspiration of S.Y. Agnon's Nobel Prize winning Hebrew literature.

Submissions accepted until: Sunday, March 17, 2013

Works can be submitted in Hebrew or English

To email: agnon-h@zahav.net.il

or by post to: Agnon House, 16 Klausner Street, Jerusalem 93388 Israel (please add cover sheet with your name, address and email, grade, age and school)

First prize: $100 and a book of Agnon's writing

Second and Third Prizes: Volume of Agnon's writings

All winners are invited for a private tour of the Agnon House with their families on their next visit to Jerusalem.

Educators can visit WebYeshiva.org/AgnonArchives for recorded lessons and courses on Agnon's stories and novels, archives of resource and teaching materials, for use in your classroom. These courses were delivered live at Agnon House in Jerusalem and broadcast via WebYeshiva.org
